

Chrystal Evans Hurst
She's Still There: Rescuing the Girl in You
Potential Interview Questions

1. You co-authored your first book, the bestselling Kingdom Woman, with your father Dr. Tony Evans. How was the experience of publishing with your father? What prompted you to write this subsequent book?
2. You're a busy speaker, worship leader, home-schooling mother to five children, wife, and author ... how do you balance it all?
3. In your book, you open up about very personal challenges including an unmarried pregnancy in college and financial troubles. Why did you choose to share these parts of your life story?
4. Women oftentimes confront the realization that their present life doesn't resemble their past expectations. Why do you think this is such a common occurrence and what should women do when they feel this way?
5. What does it mean to drift and how is drifting destructive? What is the key to ending drift in your life?
6. Take us through your GAIN perspective process. Why does this process help you take inventory of your situation and your soul?
7. What's your advice for a young woman graduating and facing the "real world" today? And, what would you say to a mother who feels lost in responsibility and unsure of who they are and what they want?
8. We are all familiar with the term "season of life" ... why can it be so difficult to embrace the season of life you're living in? What steps can be taken to help someone accept their life season?
9. You write that pain has a purpose ... what would you say to the women out there who can only see the pain and the mess in their lives?
10. What are the steps you outline for moving toward achieving your goals?
11. How can we nurture our souls, and why is this so important to make time for in our busy lives?
12. What do you hope readers will take away from your book?